The next great social event for this city.

The next great social event for this city.

Unless Butler McAllister springs something new and startling upon us, will be the marriage of Mme. de Barrios, the beautiful and wealthy widow of General de Barrios, at one time President of Guatanala. Mme de Barrios has made her home in this city for seven or eight years. She has a palatial residence on Fifth avenue, where she entertains in magnificent style, and now she is to wed a Spanish Donnamed Jose Martinez de Roda. Mme. de Barrios was married at the age of Hand is not now more than 35 vears of age, yet she is the mother of seven children. She is really a beautiful woman of the brunette type. Seen at the opera, tricked out in diamonds amounting to a half million dollars, side is more porgeous than beautiful, but as I haw ter last year at a recention given by ex. Minister Roosevelt, I thought she was as perfect a type of womanhood as I had ever seen. She wore a gown of white silk and she did not display a single piece of pwelry. Mrs. Hicks Lord was there with a king a ransom of jewels on her person and a number of other ladies were dazzing in their ornamentation, but this little Guatemalian in white, without either a diamond or a pearl, was alsolutely beautiful A GREAT MATRIMONIAL EVENT.

as perfect a type of womanood as that ever seen. She wore a gown of white slik and she did not display a single piece of jewelry. Mrs. Hicks-Lord was there with a kingle ransom of jewels on her person and a number of other ledies were dazzling in their ornamentation, but this little Guatemalian in white, without either a diamond or a pearl, was alsolutely beautiful in her simplicity and as refreshing in appearance as a dewdrop in a rose. Like pretty much all men who attain power in the Certral and South American States. General Juste Ruffino de Barrios was a first-class secoundrel and robber. From the time that he attained the presidency of Guatemala until he was very properly and justly killed in battle in 1885, he accumulated wealth with enormous rapidity. It seems almost incredible that in a space of less than ten years he should have stolen from the miserable, and half-starved people of Guatemala a fortune estimated at $6,000,030 or $8.000,000. His widow is now credited with the possession of $5,000,000. Every dollar of; this money was gained as dishonestly as that which Morgan the Buccaneer accumulated in the Antilles. Like all official thieves in the republics to the south of us. De Barrios had shipped his ill-gotten wealth out of the country, and would have undoubtedly soon followed it had it not here for the cutting short of his career. One of the humors of the last campaign in this city was the publication of a list of names of wealthy and influential women who were opposed to the profligate and carrupt Tammany Hall government. This document was gotten out by the Muchamp supporters of Mr. Scott for Mayor. Prominent among the names of the ladies pleading for honest and refined government was Mme. De Barrios. The probabilities are that the little woman signed the potition with that thoughtlessness with which most people attach their names to public documents, but the comment at the time was that it would be a pretty difficult matter to establish a form of government in this city which would compare with Jordan Taylor, of the county of Buckingham, was born on the 25th day of February, in the year 1739. He was therefore 39 years old on the 26th day of February, 1832, and is now in his 100th year. He was born within 100 yards of where he now lives, and has resided there all his life. He is in strong and vigorous health for a man of his time of life and takes a large amount of exercise, thinking nothing of walking ten or tweive miles. He is about five feet eight inches tall and is erect in his walk and manner and is an earnest, intelligent old man, whose recollections of the early days of this century are very interesting. He was a soldier in the war of 1812 and draws $8 a month pension.

FRESH AIR AND FIRE. What a world of wisdom there is in the words of this simple old man! He proved that resolution and self-denial are among the greatest gifts of human nature. He never closes his door in winter, but keeps it always open in the daytime regardless of the weather. However, his fire-place is about six feet broad, and he keeps a blazing fire all the time. He believes in plenty of fresh air and exercise.

EMPHATIC AND VIGOROUS.

EMPHATIC AND VIGOROUS.

He is very straightforward and impetuous and when crossed uses a certain kind of emphatic language which cannot be paralleled by any of this generation. This statement has been doubted, for one of the leaders of the Virginia bar—a lawyer of justly high repute—has long been conceded the palm for the use of emphatic language, but those who are well qualified from their own habits to judge state that he cannot compare with the peculiar vigor of this extraordinary old man. He probably learned the habit in the war of 1812, when the traditions of "Our Army in Flanders" and its somewhat singular claim to fame were fresher and more vigorous than at present. Take him all in all, Jordan Taylor is an unique figure and deserves at least a passing paragraph. He proves what I have long contended forthat Buckingham is the healthiest county in Virginia, and as healthy, perhaps, as any in the world.

If it had been an ordinary election probably many thousands more would have alined themselves to Mr. Bores. But it was an extraordinary election. The Legislature to be chosen would have to elect a United States senator to succeed Senator Allison. Of course all good Republicans desired to have Allison succeed himself, and thus appeals were made in his behalf. The Allison interests triumphed and Boies was not only out of the party, but he had failed to accomplish the objects at which he had aimed.

But Boies did not feel that there was no strong man to run for Governor they could make more gains.

Popular opinion grew greater and greater that Boies would make a better fight than any other candidate, and the State committee decided to offer the Waterloo lawyer the nomination.

He had no hope that he would be elected, but he accepted the offer because it had been so popularly made and because he would not rest under the imputation of being afraid of getting beaten.

THE UNEXPECTED.

The campaign was vigorous. The questions of anti-monopoly legislation, of tariff reform, and of prohibition were discussed.

Therefore, because his creed of personal liberty compelled him he entered into the anti-prohibition movement.

His friends in the Republican party remonstrated. They argued that by his course he would jeopardize the safety of the party.

He answered that he cared more for his principles than for the organization.

A State campaign was pending and a legislature was to be chosen. It was a critical moment and the Republicans become and the Republicans protest against the Republican prohibition policy and against the election of its candidates for office. He signed the protest, obtained signatures from his friends and circulated the document from one boundary of the size to the other.

Thousands supported Mr. Boies in making that protest. Like him they did not belong to the Republican organization for the gain of office, but because they felt that the Republican party stood for the principles in which they believed. When they saw that the party who had not longer represent their principles they left it, that the party was not.

If it had been an ordinary election probably many thousands more would have allied themselves to Mr. Boies, But the gristing many thousands more would have allied themselves to Mr. Boies, But the gristing many thousands more would have allied themselves to Mr. Boies, But the gristing many thousands more would have allied the party was not.

He had opposed enormous and increasing appropriations by the Federal Government. He found that so had the Democratic party. Therefore on that ground he could be a Democrat.

And so this man, without changing a single consistent of the conduct of national affairs, entered the Democratic party and became a strong man in its councils.

In the fight over prohibition he had acted merely as an independent citizen. In the national campairn of 1894 he acted as a Democratic party and became a strong man in the councils.
